

Betsye Moon Park

Betsye Moon Park MA has long been devoted to enhancing the education and increasing the opportunities of women globally—a characteristic that she is certain she inherited from her mother, Dr. Joan Moon. Throughout her career, this has been an underlying force for her that has always remained present even while she was building and maintaining powerful, smoothly-functioning organizations.

She joined the Women's Health Dynamics Institute in 2013 as the Director of Operations. A decision that was easy for her because it allows her to support her mother's work and fulfills Betsye's own desire to support women's health initiatives. This is the perfect fit for her based upon her extensive background in management, fundraising, and programming including four years of work for Mekong Capital in Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam, four years of experience as the Joffrey Ballet's Finance Manager in Chicago, IL, and two years as an adjunct faculty member at Columbia College-Chicago. At Mekong Capital and the Joffrey Ballet, she worked extensively with boards and senior management to build long-term strategic plans, recruit and train personnel, and oversee day-to-day operations in a number of different departments.

Park currently maintains the position of Interim Executive Director for the Creative Arts Council of Wells County in Bluffton, Indiana. In addition to her work at Women's Health Dynamics Institute, Park is also dedicated to fighting human trafficking and modern slavery, both in the United States and abroad.

Betsye earned her Bachelor's degree from The University of Wyoming and her Master's degree from Columbia College Chicago. She is married to Johnny and lives in Bluffton, Indiana, with their two adorable children. In her spare time, Betsye enjoys running, yoga, volunteering and simply having fun with her family.
